SOFT SHELL CRAB

I had never eaten soft shell crab before my visit to Chez Thuy, and I wasn't wholly expecting to like it. I'm not generally a fan of eating fish or crustaceans in their whole and unaltered state (I'm from the South, and somehow, the idea of biting off the heads of crawfish never appealed). But this particular delicacy changed my mind. Should you have similar qualms, let me assure you that this gorgeous, deep-fried crab is more akin to eating the finest, sweetest crabmeat that happens to be formed in the shape of a crab. Cast aside your misgivings and dive right in; the crab is fine. —LB

COCONUT FRIED BANANAS WITH VANILLA ANGLAIS

I like to think of this pretty little dish as a sweet appetizer for your breakfast. When ripe bananas are battered in a coconutty concoction, fried and dipped in a delicate, creamy vanilla sauce, they become the most wonderful way to start the morning. It's sweet (but not too sweet), memorable and delicious. Both light and rich, exotic and comfortable, this dish has a beautiful blend of flavors and textures that just makes you smile. Plus, during brunch happy hour, Saturday–Sunday, 9:30–11:30, an order of coconut fried bananas is just $2. —AC
